

SHAMROCK OIL & GAS CORP. v. SHEETS ET AL.,
DOING BUSINESS AS FRIONA INDEPENDENT OIL CO.

CERTIORARI TO THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FIFTH CIRCUIT.

No. 727. Argued April 8, 1941.—Decided April 28, 1941.

1. Removability of suits from state to federal courts is determined by the federal removal statute, unaffected by local law. P. 104.
2. The right of removal under the Act of 1887, Jud. Code § 28, is confined to the defendant or defendants. P. 104.
3. The interposition by the citizen defendant in a suit in a state court, of a counterclaim setting up an independent cause of action involving the requisite jurisdictional amount, does not confer upon the non-citizen plaintiff the right of removal. P. 107.

The amount of the plaintiff's demand in the state court is immaterial.

4. Not only does the language of the jurisdictional Act of 1887 evidence the Congressional purpose to restrict the jurisdiction of the federal courts on removal, but the policy of the successive Acts of Congress regulating the jurisdiction of federal courts is one calling for the strict construction of such jurisdiction. P. 108.

115 F. 2d 880, affirmed.

CERTIORARI, 312 U. S. 675, to review the reversal of a judgment of the District Court in a suit removed from a state court. The judgment went in favor of the defendant, petitioner herein, both on the cause of action set up in the complaint and on a counterclaim.

Mr. W. M. Sutton, with whom Messrs. R. C. Johnson, Joseph B. Dooley, and R. A. Wilson were on the brief, for petitioner.

The cross-action or counterclaim filed by the respondents sought affirmative relief for more than $3,000 on a matter unrelated to the verified account sued upon by petitioner.

Under Texas practice a cross-action or counterclaim such as that here involved is a suit, and one who defends it is a defendant. Cf. Mason City & Fort Dodge R. Co. v. Boynton, 204 U. S. 570; Merchants Heat & Light Co. v. James B. Clow & Sons, 204 U. S. 286; Kirby v. American Soda Fountain Co., 194 U. S. 141.

The cross-action or counterclaim was for damages totaling $7,200 for alleged breach of contract. Such contract allegedly was made on a different date from that upon which the indebtedness to the petitioner was incurred, and was unrelated to that indebtedness.

To that cross-action, petitioner not only occupied the position of a defendant but was an actual defendant within the letter and intent of the removal statute.

Of twenty-five decisions by the lower federal courts since the enactment of § 28 of the Judicial Code in 1887, wherein was involved the right of a defendant to a cross-action to remove such cross-action, twenty-one recognize the right of removal. The cases upholding the right of removal are better reasoned. See Bankers Securities Corp. v. Insurance Equities Corp., 85 F. 2d 856, 857; American Fruit Growers v. LaRoche, 39 F. 2d 243, 244; San Antonio Suburban Irrigated Farms v. Shandy, 29 F. 2d 579, 581; Wichita Royalty Co. v. City National Bank, 18 F. Supp. 609, 610; 95 F. 2d 671; 306 U. S. 103.

The decision that the term "defendant" in the Removal Act is used in a technical sense and refers only to the party designated as the original defendant in the action, conflicts with decisions of this Court as well as those above referred to which directly pass upon the question. In Mason City & Fort Dodge R. Co. v. Boynton, 204 U. S. 570, 579, this Court held that the word "defendant" as used in the Act was directed to more important matters than the burden of proof or the right to open and close. It has repeatedly held that, under the Judiciary Acts of 1875 and 1887-8, in determining the right of removal, the parties should be realigned in accordance with the matter in dispute without regard to the position they occupy in the pleadings as plaintiff or defendant. [Citing many cases.]

The decision that the Act gives the right of removal to an original defendant only, likewise conflicts with the following decisions recognizing the removal right of a third party, brought in by a cross-action. Habermel v. Mong, 31 F. 2d 822; Houlton Savings Bank v. American Laundry Machinery Co., 7 F. Supp. 858; Ellis v. Peake, 22 F. Supp. 908. Distinguishing West v. City of Aurora, 6 Wall. 139.

The plain meaning of the language used in the Act may not be ignored. New Orleans v. Quinlan, 173 U. S. 191.

The action of Congress in omitting from the Act of 1887-8 the provision in the Judiciary Act of 1789 that the defendant should "at the time of entering his appearance in such state court" file his petition for removal, which language was held by the Supreme Court in West v. City of Aurora, supra, to limit the right of removal to an original defendant under the Act of 1789, manifests an intent that the right of removal should not be limited to the original defendant. Fisk v. Henairie, 142 U. S. 459.

Where the defendant in the cross-action files his removal petition at or before the time required, by the laws of the State or the rules of the state court, to plead to the complaint in the cross-action, § 29 Jud. Code has been complied with.

Cases denying to a defendant in a cross-action the right to remove are based upon West v. City of Aurora, supra, which is not controlling under the present removal statutes in the present controversy.

Mr. E. Byron Singleton for respondents.

MR. JUSTICE STONE delivered the opinion of the Court.

Respondent, a citizen of Texas and defendant in a court of that state, set up by way of counterclaim or cross-action against petitioner, the non-citizen plaintiff in the suit, a cause of action for damages in excess of $3,000 for breach of a contract, which was separate and distinct from the alleged indebtedness sued upon by the petitioner. The question for decision is whether the suit in which the counterclaim is filed, is one removable by the plaintiff to the federal district court on grounds of diversity of citizenship under § 28 of the Judicial Code, 28 U. S. C. § 71.

The plaintiff in the state court removed the cause to the United States District Court for Northern Texas, which denied respondent's motion to remand. After a trial on the merits it gave judgment for petitioner, plaintiff below, both on the cause of action set up on its complaint in the suit and on the counterclaim. The Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit reversed, 115 F. 2d 880, and ordered the cause remanded to the state court on the ground that the plaintiff in the state court was not a "defendant" within the meaning of § 28 of the Judicial Code, and so was not entitled to remove the cause under that section, which in terms authorizes the removal of a suit subject to its provisions only "by the defendant or defendants therein." We granted certiorari, 312 U. S. 675, to resolve the conflict of the decision of the court below and that of Waco Hardware Co. v. Michigan Stove Co., 91 F. 289; see West v. Aurora City, 6 Wall. 139, with numerous decisions of other circuit courts of appeals. Carson & Rand Lumber Co. v. Holtzclaw, 39 F. 578; Bankers Securities Corp. v. Insurance Equities Corp., 85 F. 2d 856; Chambers v. Skelly Oil Co., 87 F. 2d 853, and cases cited in note 5 of the opinion below, 115 F. 2d 880, 882.

We assume for purposes of decision, that if the cause was removable by petitioner, the removal proceedings were regular and timely; that respondent's counterclaim stated an independent cause of action and that the amount in controversy in that action exceeded the jurisdictional amount, and we confine our decision to the question of statutory construction raised by the petition for certiorari.

Petitioner argues that although nominally a plaintiff in the state court it was in point of substance a defendant to the cause of action asserted in the counterclaim upon which, under Texas procedure, judgment could go against the plaintiff in the full amount demanded. Peck v. McKellar, 33 Tex. 234; Gimbel & Son v. Gomprecht & Co., 89 Tex. 497; 35 S. W. 470; Harris v. Schlinke, 95 Tex. 88; 65 S. W. 172. But at the outset it is to be noted that decision turns on the meaning of the removal statute and not upon the characterization of the suit or the parties to it by state statutes or decisions. Mason City & Ft. Dodge R. Co. v. Boynton, 204 U. S. 570. The removal statute, which is nationwide in its operation, was intended to be uniform in its application, unaffected by local law definition or characterization of the subject matter to which it is to be applied. Hence the Act of Congress must be construed as setting up its own criteria, irrespective of local law, for determining in what instances suits are to be removed from the state to the federal courts. Cf. Burnet v. Harmel, 287 U. S. 103, 110.

Section 28 of the Judicial Code authorizes removal of the suits to which it applies "by the defendant or defendants therein."¹ During the period from 1875 to 1887

¹"Any suit of a civil nature, at law or in equity, arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, or treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority, of which the district courts of the United States are given original jurisdiction, in any State court, may be removed by the defendant or defendants therein to the district court of the United States for the proper district. Any other suit of a civil nature, at law or in equity, of which the district courts of the United States are given jurisdiction, in any State court, may be removed into the district court of the United

the statute governing removals, 18 Stat. 470, specifically gave to "either party" to the suit the privilege of removal. At all other periods since the adoption of the Judiciary Act of 1789 the statutes governing removals have in terms given the privilege of removal to "defendants" alone, except the Act of 1867, 14 Stat. 558, continued as part of § 28 of the Judicial Code, which permits either plaintiff or defendant to remove where there is the additional ground of prejudice and local influence.

Section 12 of the Judiciary Act of 1789, 1 Stat. 79, declared that "if a suit be commenced in any state court against an alien . . . or . . . against a citizen of another state, and the matter in dispute exceeds" the jurisdictional amount "and the defendant shall, at the time of entering his appearance in such state court, file a petition for the removal of the cause," it shall be removable to the circuit court. In West v. Aurora States for the proper district by the defendant or defendants therein, being nonresidents of that state. . . . And where a suit is brought in any State court, in which there is a controversy between a citizen of the State in which the suit is brought and a citizen of another State, any defendant, being such citizen of another State, may remove such suit into the district court of the United States for the proper district, at any time before the trial thereof, when it shall be made to appear to said district court that from prejudice or local influence he will not be able to obtain justice in such State court, or in any other State court to which the said defendant may, under the laws of the State, have the right, on account of such prejudice or local influence, to remove said cause. . . . At any time before the trial of any suit in any district court, which has been removed to said court from a State court on the affidavit of any party plaintiff that he had reason to believe and did believe that, from prejudice or local influence, he was unable to obtain justice in said State court, the district court shall, on application of the other party, examine into the truth of said affidavit and the grounds thereof, and, unless it shall appear to the satisfaction of said court that said party will not be able to obtain justice in said State court, it shall cause the same to be remanded thereto. . . ."

City, 6 Wall. 139, this Court held that removal of a cause from a state to a federal court could be effected under § 12 only by a defendant against whom the suit is brought by process served upon him. Consequently a non-citizen plaintiff in the state court, against whom the citizen-defendant had asserted in the suit a claim by way of counterclaim which, under state law, had the character of an original suit, was not entitled to remove the cause. The Court ruled that the plaintiff, having submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the state court, was not entitled to avail himself of a right of removal conferred only on a defendant who has not submitted himself to the jurisdiction.

By § 3 of the Act of 1875, the practice on removal was greatly liberalized. It authorized "either party or any one or more of the plaintiffs or defendants entitled to remove any suit" from the state court to do so upon petition in such suit to the state court "before or at the term at which said cause could be first tried and before the trial thereof." These provisions were continued until the adoption of the provisions of the present statute, so far as now material, by the Act of 1887, 24 Stat. 552.

We cannot assume that Congress, in thus revising the statute, was unaware of the history which we have just detailed,² or certainly that it regarded as without signifi-

"The next change proposed is to restrict the right to remove a cause from the State to the Federal court to the defendant. As the law now provides, either plaintiff or defendant may remove a cause. This was an innovation on the law as it existed from 1789 until the passage of the act of 1875.

"In the opinion of the committee it is believed to be just and proper to require the plaintiff to abide his selection of a forum. If he elects to sue in a State court when he might have brought his suit in a Federal court there would seem to be, ordinarily, no good reason to allow him to remove the cause. Experience in the practice under the act of 1875 has shown that such a privilege is often cance the omission from the earlier act of the phrase "either party," and the substitution for it of the phrase authorizing removal by the "defendant or defendants" in the suit, or the like omission of the provision for removal at any time before the trial, and the substitution for it of the requirement that the removal petition be filed by the "defendant" at or before the time he is required to plead in the state court.

We think these alterations in the statute are of controlling significance as indicating the Congressional purpose to narrow the federal jurisdiction on removal by reviving in substance the provisions of § 12 of the Judiciary Act of 1789 as construed in West v. Aurora City, supra. See H. Rept. No. 1078, 49th Cong., 1st Sess., p. 1. If, in reënacting in substance the pertinent provisions of § 12 of the Judiciary Act, Congress intended to restrict the operation of those provisions or to reject the construction which this Court had placed upon them, by saving the right of a plaintiff, in any case or to any extent, to remove the cause upon the filing of a counterclaim praying an affirmative judgment against him, we can hardly suppose that it would have failed to use some appropriate language to express that intention. That its omission of the reference in the earlier statute to removal by "either party" was deliberate is indicated by the committee reports which recommended the retention of the provisions of the Act of 1867 for removal by either plaintiff or defendant when an additional ground of removal used by plaintiffs to obtain unfair concessions and compromises from defendants who are unable to meet the expenses incident to litigation in the Federal courts remote from their homes.

"The committee, however, believe that when a plaintiff makes affidavit that from prejudice or local influence he believes that he will not be able to obtain justice in the State court he should have the right to remove the cause to the Federal court. The bill secures that right to a plaintiff."

is prejudice and local influence. See H. Rept., op. cit., supra, p. 2.

The cases in the federal courts on which petitioner relies have distinguished the decision in West v. Aurora City, supra, on the ground that it arose under an earlier statute. But we find no material difference upon the present issue between the two statutes, and the reasoning of the Court in support of its decision is as applicable to one as to the other. In some of those cases it is suggested also that a plaintiff who brings his suit in a state court for less than the jurisdictional amount does not waive his right to remove, upon the filing of a counterclaim against him. And petitioner argues that this is so even when, as in the present case, the plaintiff's demand is in excess of the jurisdictional amount. But we think the amount of the plaintiff's demand in the state court is immaterial, for one does not acquire an asserted right by not waiving it, and the question here is not of waiver but of the acquisition of a right which can only be conferred by Act of Congress. We can find no basis for saying that Congress, by omitting from the present statute all reference to "plaintiffs," intended to save a right of removal to some plaintiffs and not to others. The question of the right of removal, decided in Wichita Royalty Co. v. City National Bank, 95 F. 2d 671, 674, on which petitioner also relies, was not presented to or passed upon by this Court. 306 U. S. 103. It involved factors not here present which we find it unnecessary to consider.

Not only does the language of the Act of 1887 evidence the Congressional purpose to restrict the jurisdiction of the federal courts on removal, but the policy of the successive acts of Congress regulating the jurisdiction of federal courts is one calling for the strict construction of such legislation. The power reserved to the states under the Constitution to provide for the determination of controversies in their courts, may be restricted only by the action of Congress in conformity to the Judiciary Articles of the Constitution. "Due regard for the rightful independence of state governments, which should actuate federal courts, requires that they scrupulously confine their own jurisdiction to the precise limits which the statute has defined." Healy v. Ratta, 292 U. S. 263, 270; see Kline v. Burke Construction Co., 260 U. S. 226, 233, 234; Matthews v. Rodgers, 284 U. S. 521, 525; cf. Elgin v. Marshall, 106 U. S. 578.

CALIFORNIA v. THOMPSON.

CERTIORARI TO THE APPELLATE DEPARTMENT OF THE SUPERIOR COURT, LOS ANGELES COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.

No. 687. Argued April 3, 1941.—Decided April 28, 1941.

1. The Commerce Clause did not wholly withdraw from the States the power to regulate matters of local concern with respect to which Congress has not exercised its power, even though the regulation affects interstate commerce. P. 113.
2. The federal Motor Carrier Act of 1935 does not include the regulation of casual or occasional interstate transportation of passengers by persons not engaged in such transportation as a regular occupation or business, § 303 (b) (9). P. 112.
3. A California statute requires every "transportation agent," defined as one who sells or offers to sell or negotiate for transportation on the public highways of the State, to obtain a license assuring his fitness and to file a bond securing faithful performance of the transportation contracts which he negotiates. It applies alike to agents negotiating for interstate or intrastate commerce, is not a revenue measure, and does not appear to increase the cost of interstate commerce. Its apparent object is to safeguard members of the public, desiring to secure transportation by motor vehicle, from fraud and overreaching. Held, consistent with the Commerce Clause when applied to a person who, without having obtained the
